- Overdraft Lines of Credit

Southern Bank's operations are significantly influenced by general economic conditions including monetary and fiscal policies of the U.S. Government and Federal Reserve. Additionally, Southern Bank is subject to policies and regulations issued by financial institution regulatory agencies, including the Federal Reserve Bank (FRB) and the Missouri Department of Finance. Each of these factors may influence interest rates, loan demand, prepayment rates and deposit flows. Interest rates influence Southern Bank's cost of funds. Lending activities are affected by the demand for financing real estate and other types of loans, which in turn is affected by the interest rates at which such financing may be offered. Southern Bank offers a wide variety of home loans at competitive rates, including long term, short term, fixed and variable rate loans. Southern Bank intends to continue to focus on its lending programs for one-to-four family residential real estate, commercial and consumer financing located in Southeast/Southwest Missouri and Northeast/ Central Arkansas and Southwest Illinois.
